

Privacy policy

Decoline BV values your privacy. Although most information on this site is available without the need to provide personal details, it is nevertheless possible that users are asked for personal information. Users can always, free of charge and on request, oppose the use of their data for direct marketing. To this end, they shall address themselves to Decoline BV.

In accordance with the law on the processing of personal data of July 8, 1992, users have a legal right to inspect and, if necessary, correct their personal data.

Decoline BV uses the stored personal data for providing quotations, processing orders, sending order confirmations, delivery of products, whether or not via an external carrier, preparing and sending invoices and for internal monitoring and analysis of its own sales data.

You have the right to object to certain processing activities, such as providing you with information for promotional purposes or including your data in the sales listings on our website. In addition, in certain cases you have the right of access, communication, correction or deletion as well as the right to obtain restriction of processing. For this purpose, you can contact us at info@decoline.com.

Decoline BV may collect anonymous or aggregated data of a non-personal nature, such as browser type or IP address, the operating system you are using or the domain name of the website used to arrive at the Decoline BV website or through which you leave it. This enables us to continually optimise the Decoline BV website for users.

Protection of data. Decoline BV ensures that your personal data are protected by appropriate administrative, technical and physical security measures against accidental, unlawful or unauthorised destruction, loss, alteration, access, disclosure or use.

This Privacy Statement may be updated at any time and without prior notice to reflect the data usage correctly.